Fatal accident found to be murder

What first appeared to be a fatal auto accident is now being investigated as a highway murder because of an alert local Madison County deputy coroner.

The murder is being investigated by the Department of Criminal Investigation of the Illinois State Police along with three other highway shooting incidents occurring in this region since Thursday afternoon.

Todd Scrum, 21, of Granite City, was killed by a shotgun blast as he drove home from Edwardsville early Saturday morning on Interstate 270.

Ed Werner, a deputy coroner for 20 years, found several small lead pellets as he prepared the body of Mr. Scrum for embalming at his funeral chapel in Pontoon Beach Saturday morning.

"I called (Madison County Coroner) Mrs. (Dallas) Burke and she said to have the body X-rayed," Werner said. "I took the body back to the hospital (St. Elizabeth Medical Center) and it was X-rayed. The head was full of lead pellets, 200 to 300 of them."

Werner said Mr. Scrum had a "quarter-size" wound to the left side of his head and that he had also suffered 75 to 100 cuts. It was assumed the cuts were from shattered glass in the driver's window.

It wasn't until the X-rays were (See MURDER, Page 10A)

Woman told she could not run for board seat

GRANITE CITY — A Granite City woman says she was told she couldn't file for a two-year, unexpired term on the District 9 School Board because she lived within the city limits.

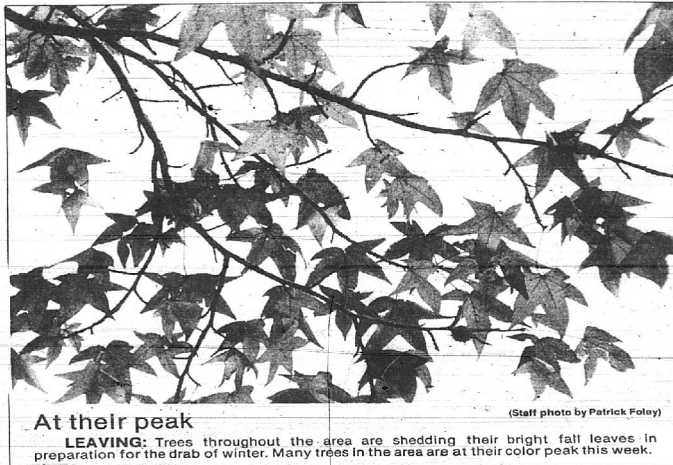

The woman, Tomye Hopke, said she received a petition from Marjorie Burdge, a District 9 secretary, in August but was informed by Burdge that she couldn't run because she lived in the city.

"It didn't make sense to me, since it was a term vacated by somebody else," Hopke said.

Board attorney William Schooley said only rural candidates could run for the seat due to a provision in the Illinois Statutes that says if there's a vacancy, the successor must have the same residential qualifications as his predecessor. This applies because the two-year seat is an unexpired term and not a new one, he said.

The seat was vacated last year when Jerry McKechnie resigned. McKechnie, who lives in an unincorporated area, was later replaced by a Joe Macios, who also lives in an

TIF funds would jump if veto overridden

GRANITE CITY — The city stands to get hundreds of thousands of dollars more for its downtown redevelopment project if the Illinois House of Representatives follows the lead of the Senate in overriding Gov. James Thompson's veto of a Tax Increment Financing appropriation.

The Senate on Thursday voted 54-4 to override Thompson's veto of a $6.4 million TIF appropriation. The appropriation represented an expansion of the state TIF program, which was budgeted at $3.3 million last year.

Granite City was scheduled to receive $17,000 in TIF reimbursements based on the $3.3 million budget. If the House also approves the override, the city would receive $467,700.

Last year, the city decided to designate money for its downtown area as a TIF district in conjunction with the city's plan to develop a downtown shopping center.

The state adopted the incremental financing law last year, allowing communities to receive a portion of state sales taxes that come from businesses within a designated district. The idea of TIF areas is to encourage development in areas that need extra help.

All TIF funds given to Granite City must be used in its downtown TIF district.

Sixth Ward Alderman Jim Miller, chairman of the City Council's Downtown Rehabilitation Committee, said the override would give a boost to downtown.

"It's not significant enough to help us with the (shopping center) project, but it gives us more money for street work and beautification," Miller said.

"Probably before the end of the year, you'll see some significant things happening on a few blocks down there" if the House agrees to an override, Miller said.

State Rep. Sam Wolf, D-Granite City, said he would support an override in the House. Wolf said an override measure would probably be voted on Nov. 4, 5 or 6. He did not predict its chances of passage.

Wolf said he and other legislators want to resolve some problems with the TIF program, but support the larger appropriation.

"I think there are certain abuses going on right now. But that wouldn't prevent me from voting for the override," Wolf said. He said the Granite City downtown rehabilitation project is a major reason he will support an override.

"The City of Granite City could be used as a model for this program," Wolf said. He said some cities have used the TIF program "as an excuse to get out of paying taxes."

Wolf said the purpose of the program is to create or reconstruct business areas, especially in areas where economic growth has stalled.

He said the legislature is likely to amend the program next year.

Miller said the year-by-year TIF appropriation process illustrates the need for the TIF to be a permanent state program. If the state had long-term guarantees for TIF appropriations, Granite City could use its bonding power to fund its downtown project, Miller said.

Miller, city economic director Alan Orthals, 4th Ward Alderman Dan Partney and 2nd Ward Alderman Jeff Warthen recently attended the first statewide meeting of the Tax Increment Financing Association.

The association was formed as a private lobbying group for the TIF program, as a clearinghouse of information on the TIF program for cities and businesses, and as an organization to iron out problems with the TIF program, Miller said. It is open to cities and businesses.

Granite City recently joined the association. The association divided the state into five TIF regions and designated Orthals as this region's contact person, Miller said.

State Sen. Sam Vadala, D-Edwardsville, voted for the override.

Vadala said he toured Granite City's TIF district several days before the vote.

GC senior council wants control

Senior citizens feel they have little control over the Granite City Township Building, said Gertrude Barkley, president of the Granite City Council of Seniors. The council has decided to start a fund drive to open its own senior center. Barkley said seniors are never able to schedule the building for weekend dances, can use the building only two nights a month and have been given no place for storage.

Child's mom to meet parents

The mother of Jason Robertson, a 7-year-old who has the AIDS virus, said she will meet parents at Prather Elementary School at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 9, to discuss an educational alternative being offered to her son, who will probably be taught in a portable classroom next to Prather.

United Way gets big cash boost

The United Way campaign received its largest pledge — $200,000 delivered in cash last week in a wagon — from the Granite City Steel Torch Club. The donation was in bundles of $10 bills. The pledge was the largest made by a single employee group.

Kittel dies at age 56

By Bill Bagby

Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Former Alderman Carl J. Kittel, 56, died at 4 p.m. Monday at Deaconess Hospital in St. Louis.

Ill for one year, Mr. Kittel had been hospitalized since Thursday. An obituary appears on Page 10A of today's issue.

Born in Venice, he was a lifetime resident of the Quad City Area.

He was first elected to the City Council as a 3rd Ward alderman in April 1981. He sought a second term in 1985, but was defeated by a margin of 54 votes.

As an alderman, Mr. Kittel favored the regionalization of the city's sewer treatment plant and long-term planning for the maintenance of sewers.

"I found him to be a conscientious and concerned alderman when he served on the council with me," said 5th Ward Alderman Jake Varadan. "He worked hard as an alderman. He will be a great loss to our city."

Deadline nears for Old Newsboys

By Jim Baer

Staff affiliate

There are just three days left to volunteer for the 31st annual Old Newsboys Day drive.

Deadline to register is Friday (Oct. 30). Those interested in signing up as an individual or with a group should call the Old Newsboys Hotline at (314) 821-0211.

Friday also is the deadline for area youth organizations seeking to be added to the list of recipients.

Officials, who are expecting nearly 10,000 volunteers to work the event, estimate that more than 7,000 volunteers already have signed up.

On the morning of Thursday Nov. 19, volunteers will work the streets of the St. Louis metropolitan area, raising money for children's charities by selling a special edition of the Suburban Journals.

No financial goal has been set. Officials hope to raise as much money as possible for more than 200 area children's agencies and youth organizations.

Since the Old Newsboys Day campaign began in 1957, more than $3.7 million has been raised.

The volunteers will be easy to spot. They will be wearing buff-colored aprons with red and yellow printing. The aprons were donated by Banquet Foods. Each will feature a yellow button donated by Southwestern Bell Inc. which reads "Suburban Journal Fund for Children Inc. Old Newsboys Day."

Southwestern Bell-Mobile Systems has donated phones to help officials distribute newspapers.

William E. Cornelius, president and chief executive officer of Union Electric Co. and chairman of the 1987 campaign, is thrilled to see the strong area-wide support.

"I know the job will be done well because St. Louisans have a rich heritage of supporting community efforts," he said. "We can really do something special for the youth of our community by making Old Newsboys Day a success once more."

Final arrangements are being made and registration kits will be mailed next week to the volunteers. Each kit includes the apron and button, corner assignment and a coupon for a free hot breakfast at Hardee's.

The Apples, owners of the Chesire Inn, have donated the services of their horse-drawn double-decker Omni bus for the event. Anyone buying a paper can get a free bus tour of downtown St. Louis from 7 to 9 a.m. The bus will be stationed at the downtown Marriott Hotel.

Virtually all communities in the metropolitan area will be involved, stretching from St. Charles in Missouri to Highland in Illinois. Clowns, cheerleaders, businessmen in suits, service organization volunteers and many others will be selling the papers.

Members of the local community, including the baseball Cardinals, Big Red, Blues and Steamers, will help sell the papers.

This is the second year the Suburban Journals have carried on the tradition of sponsoring the Old Newsboys Day campaign after the St. Louis Globe-Democrat ceased publication last October.

All money raised goes directly to the participating youth organizations. Money raised in the past has been used to purchase such items as books, playground equipment, wheelchairs, hearing aids, shoes, clothing, bicycles, toys and sports and recreational equipment.

Big spenders want to increase taxes

To the editor:

Everyone knows that the federal government has set a seemingly irreversible pattern of spending more money than it receives in taxes.

That's why we now have an almost $2.3 trillion national debt, which we pay interest on every single day.

Common sense tells you we must do one of two things: either raise taxes or cut spending, right?

Unfortunately, Congress has not had to confront this unpleasant choice, because there is no balanced budget requirement in our federal Constitution, as there is in so many states.

The result is simple: we borrow and borrow and borrow and the deficit gets bigger and bigger and bigger.

Fortunately, some in Congress realized that this could not go on forever.

In 1986 they passed the Gramm/Rudman/Hollings deficit reduction law. This law established a 5-year blueprint for reducing the deficit by setting reduction targets each year, with a balanced budget at the end of the five years.

Well, even the best ideas seem to run into controversy. The Gramm/Rudman/Hollings law was challenged in the Supreme Court as being unconstitutional. Drafters of the law knew that their blueprint for a balanced budget would be meaningless if it did not provide some incentive for Congress to meet its yearly deficit reduction goals.

So, they provided for automatic cuts in the federal budget, with exceptions for Social Security and other important programs, to meet the reduction targets in the bill if Congress failed to meet them.

The problem is that they vested this power for automatic cuts in the Congressional Budget Office, a branch of Congress, instead of in some executive branch agency.

The Supreme Court thought this violated the separation of powers clause in the Constitution.

This year, Congress got around to fixing that problem by changing the law so that any automatic cuts would be carried out by the Office of Management and Budget, an executive branch agency.

Great! We're on the road to a balanced budget at last? Not so fast.

By now, over a year has passed since the passage of the Gramm/Rudman/Hollings Act, and instead of reaching the deficit targets of $144 billion in FY 1987 and $108 billion in FY 1988, Congress has badly overshot these goals both years.

That's why Congressional budget-makers, in "fixing" the Gramm/Rudman/Hollings law, decided to raise the targets and stretch the process out by two additional years.

Unfortunately, at the same time, Congressional big spenders still want to duck spending cuts.

They are anxious to "force" the President into tax increases," as they put it, in order to meet new reduction targets. To that end, they were willing to "fix" the Gramm/Rudman/Hollings law and sent it to the President for his signature.

For my part, I believe some type of deficit reduction plan is better than none at all, so I supported the "fix."

I am confident, the President won't increase taxes — who knows? — maybe we really will cut spending in the face of new deficit reduction targets. I hope so.

The President has signed the legislation into law, and now we have a legal deficit reduction plan.

From what I've seen since I've been in Washington, there won't be any spending cuts until we force them. That's why I supported the Gramm/Rudman/Hollings "fix."

But while I support reducing spending, I'll oppose any effort by the big spenders to use it as a fast track to increase taxes.

Small rise in temperature beginning of problem

By Prof. Henry Firsching
SIUE School of Sciences

The overall temperature of the world has risen about 1 degree in the last century.

As small as it may seem, this is a very significant change in the world's temperature. But determining its value is not easy.

Even though temperatures have been recorded regularly for well over 100 years, these are not too helpful. Most of these temperatures have been in urban areas. And the amount of heat generated by the activity of the population also is significant for the local environment.

Over the last century the population has grown steadily. More and more people have used more vehicles and have had more homes to heat and air-condition.

The local temperatures have increased correspondingly.

The urban readings have been unreliable for global temperature readings. The city readings indicate that the world's temperature has increased even more than it actually has.

Nevertheless, it has been reliably determined that the temperature rise around the world is about 1 degree over the last century. The implications of this finding are important.

As the temperature of the atmosphere goes up, some of the energy gets transferred to the oceans. The ocean waters become a bit warmer as the atmosphere's temperature increases.

The ocean's contact with the atmosphere is very large because the oceans cover about three-fourths of the earth's surface.

Because of the rise in the atmospheric temperature, there has been a corresponding increase in the temperature of the oceans. This has caused a thermal expansion of the oceans. Warm water occupies a bigger volume than cold water.

The result is that the level of the sea around the world has gone up about 1 foot in the last century. This small rise is a hint of what lies ahead.

Even this 1-foot rise has created severe problems in some localities, such as Venice, Italy, and the Thames River region of London. But these problems will appear to be insignificant when compared to what will be happening in the not-too-distant future.

Tax problems for the PIK and Roll

To the editor:

Recently I introduced legislation to clarify income tax liabilities for thousands of farmers actively participating in the PIK and Roll program. PIK and Roll is a government marketing program implemented to boost farm prices while allowing the government to reduce its large surplus of grain.

The PIK and Roll program allows a farmer to secure a loan and pledge his grain as collateral.

The farmer then uses his commodity certificates to pay off his loan. In this manner, by eliminating the outstanding obligation, the grain utilized to secure the loan would revert back to its rightful owner — the farmer.

However, a recent regulation issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) wreaked havoc in the PIK and Roll program. Essentially, this USDA ruling creates a "fictional sale" within the PIK and Roll procedure.

If fairness, this fictional sale provides great benefit for farmers who have grain held in the 3-year reserve program.

It allows these farmers to avoid a penalty for early redemption of their grain and reduces the government's surplus inventory. However, it will create a devastating tax problem for the majority of farmers who are participating in the 9-month loan program.

The USDA regulation states that a farmer who redeems his loan with commodity certificates. He must first sell the grain pledged as security for the loan — pay off the loan with the proceeds from that grain sale — and then purchase his grain back with his commodity certificates.

The process is nothing more than a paper shuffle, but the Internal Revenue Service has ruled that a taxable event has taken place.

As a result, farmers who follow the PIK and Roll procedure run the risk of having the value of redeemed corn count as income against the current tax year.

Where could foster a situation where many farmers would face double taxation on the sale of a single crop in one calendar year.

In my conversations with the USDA and the Treasury Department's IRS, there is unanimous agreement that only a paper transaction is taking place. Although the problem has been recognized, no relief for the farmer has emerged.

My legislation directs the IRS to treat the paper shuffle of grain, pledged as collateral, as a non-taxable event. For federal income tax purposes, these transfers do not result in a sale of the commodity.

This legislation applies only to loan redemptions occurring after Dec. 31, 1988. In addition, a provision of the bill will allow taxpayers who have already declared this transaction a taxable event to continue to do so.

The PIK and Roll program has been instrumental in reducing our vast grain surpluses and stimulating farm prices. It is imperative that we take action soon to rectify this untenable tax situation and restore confidence in the PIK and Roll program.

Project Excel reviews BAC records

Project Excel team candidates for the Board of Trustees of Belleville Area College have been doing their homework by studying the business records of the financially strapped community college.

The candidates, Robert G. Eden, Cahokia, Avery Schermer, Granite City, Wyatt Rawlings III, Belleville, and Catherine "Kay" Bennett, Belleville, believe that a long-range plan with the goal of eliminating current and future budget deficits should be a priority for the Board of Trustees.

If elected, the candidates will set policy and stand by it; provide leadership to the administration and demand conformity to the set policy; and make decisions based on reason, not emotion, they said.

Providing a reasonably priced quality education at convenient locations throughout the BAC district is the overall goal of the Project Excel candidates.

'Extra' trash to cost more in Madison

By Donna Kimbro
Staff writer

MADISON — Final adoption of two ordinances to keep the city free of trash and discarded household items was approved Tuesday by the City Council.

Alderman Ron Grzywacz, a member of the Streets and Alleys Committee, submitted figures for the various costs for demolition of derelict structures and disposal of refuse.

The cost measure will go into effect Nov. 1 and will be strictly enforced, the council agreed.

Grzywacz said the crackdown was caused by the cost required to repeatedly clean up streets and alleys that are soon filled with trash again.

Under the ordinance, it will be the responsibility of the homeowner, landlord or person living on the premises to pay costs incurred for disposal of additional items removed, Grzywacz said.

The city will continue its weekly collection of household trash that is bagged and in containers, but will not continue to be plagued by an overwhelming amount of discarded items, he said.

Charges for removal of certain items will be: mattresses or boxsprings, $10; couches, all sizes, $5; chairs, $3; other large items, including, but not limited to, stoves, refrigerators and dressers, $5.

The charges for all tree limb removal, if they cannot be handled by the city's chipper, will be $4 per cubic yard.

The cost for the removal of debris from remodeling, including shingles, plaster, lathes, scrap lumber, cement scrap, bricks and siding, will be $4 per cubic yard.

All charges must be paid prior to the removal of any items. Residents who want trash removed are to call the city comptroller's office, which will send the superintendent of streets to the address to give an estimate of the fee for each job. Residents must then pick up a form at the comptroller's office, complete the information and pay the fee. The comptroller will notify the street department the fee has been paid and request removal be started.

Fees for demolition of one and one-half or two-level structures are set at $2,000; a one-level structure, $1,000; and sheds, garages and other "out" buildings, $500.

Police, court news

New judge gets warning for speeding

Madison County's new associate judge, Ellar Duff-Williams, was stopped for speeding by Alton police Oct. 9 but an Illinois law protected her from being ticketed.

Police said she was clocked driving 49 mph in a 30 mph zone.

She said she was to be in court in seven minutes — at 9 a.m. — in Edwardsville.

Also, she said Illinois law protects judges from being arrested when they are on their way to court.

Police told Williams she could be ticketed for speeding, but they gave her a verbal warning.

Williams said her own car was not operable, so she borrowed a car with which she was not familiar.

She said she did not realize she was speeding.

Pistol discovered by SEMC nurse preparing patient

Robert R. Cherry, 28, of Collinsville, was charged with unlawful use of a weapon and having no firearm owner's identification when a 25-caliber automatic pistol was found by a nurse preparing Cherry for X-rays after an automobile accident, according to police.

After Cherry allegedly removed the weapon from his clothing at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, the nurse gave the pistol to a security officer, who contacted the Granite City Police Department.

Cherry had been taken by ambulance to SEMC after he was a passenger in a car driven by his sister, Sharon Little of Carlyle, Ill., who was also injured. Both were treated and released from the medical center.

About 1:18 p.m. Oct. 21, the collision occurred as Little was going south in the 1600 block of Madison Avenue. A car driven by Catherine Mikolaszuk, 4028 Lake Drive, attempted to turn from a parking lot left onto Madison Avenue.

Mikolaszuk was given a ticket for having no valid driver's license and failing to yield the right of way.

unincorporated area.

Two rural candidates, Debbie Holt-Wilkinson and Marty LeVault, are seeking the two-year seat in the Nov. 3 election.

"It's not essential that the post be filled by a resident of an unincorporated area unless there aren't any other candidates running from the unincorporated area," said Bea Swartz, a spokesman for the Illinois Board of Elections.

When the issue of rural versus city vacancy selection came up when McKechnie resigned, Swartz said the election board does not interpret the residency requirement of the state school code as meaning that a successor has to be from the same area, only that an appointed member have standard residency requirements. The standard residency requirement is that all members must have lived in the district for at least one year.

State law also requires the seven-member District 9 board to have at least two rural members.

At least one of those seated for a four-year term this year must be from a rural area, assuming the two-year position goes to a rural candidate. Three holdover board members reside in the city.

taken, and an autopsy was subsequently performed, that the exact cause of Mr. Scrum's death was definite. He had died from a gunshot wound to the left side of his head and not from the auto crash.

"I've never seen anything like this before," Werner said, "I assumed it (the cause of death) was from the auto accident."

Werner later signed the death certificate and listed "traumatic wound to the head" as the cause of death.

Werner said he didn't think it odd at all that personnel at the hospital didn't discover that the wound had been caused by a gunshot.

"He'd (Mr. Scrum) been in an auto accident and had a wound like that. There's a lot of blood and it dries in the hair. You automatically assume it's from the accident," Werner said.

"Yes, sir, it could have gone unnoticed," Werner said, if some of the pellets hadn't fallen out of the wound.

Werner said he thought the gunshot had to be close range. It had to be a foot to 18 inches.

Mr. Scrum was driving home from a fraternity dance in Edwardsville when the shooting occurred at approximately 1 a.m. Saturday. He was westbound on Interstate 270 near the Interstate 255 construction site.

Births

Births recorded at St. Elizabeth Medical Center include:

GIRLS

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Morris, 4484 Lake Drive, Pontoon Beach, Oct. 22, Meagan Colleen, 7 pounds, 5 ounces.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Riggins, 174 Sunny Shores, Oct. 22, Britanni Michele, 7 pounds, 9 ounces.

BOY

Mr. and Mrs. James Walton, 4807 Kirkpatrick Homes, Oct. 23, James Daniel, 7 pounds, 10 ounces.

about one mile east of Illinois 111.

"It would almost have to be two people (involved in doing the shooting)," Werner said, based on the distance he believed the gunshot was fired from.

A man from Florida was the victim of a drive-by shooting about 15 minutes before Mr. Scrum was killed.

Edward Houser was shot in the left arm while driving east on Interstate 55-70 near the Illinois 159 interchange. He was taken to Anderson Hospital, Maryville, where he was treated and admitted. He was still a patient Monday afternoon.

DCI Special Agent Rich Kruse said the two highway shootings Saturday are being investigated, but nothing has yet linked the two.

Kruse said two other highway shooting attempts on Thursday, on I-255 near the Illinois 159 interchange, are also being investigated, but appear to be isolated incidents.

He advised motorists, especially those using the interstates, to "exercise caution if they think they are being followed or if they suspect another driver is acting unusually."

Kruse suggested persons exit the interstate and call the local police with any information, including a description of the car, license number and, if possible, a description of the driver.

Air Products wins top safety award

WASHINGTON — Twenty-nine Illinois chemical plants have received top industry awards for employee safety. Among them is Air Products and Chemicals in Granite City.

The Illinois companies were recognized for year-long operations without significant injuries to any employee, based on federal standards set by the U.S. Department of Labor.

The awards are given in two categories: for a year free of any injury requiring a day away from work, and for a year free from injury requiring not even one day's restricted activity.

"These awards are a tribute to the day-in, day-out dedication to safety by the companies, managers and employees of these Illinois facilities," commented Robert A. Roland, president of the Washington-based Chemical Manufacturers Association.

The annual safety awards, administered by the industry's Health and Safety Committee, were established in 1950 as part of an ongoing effort to ensure safe working conditions for chemical industry employees. Roland said. For the past year, 68 plants in 41 states and Canada received awards.

The National Safety Council has consistently named the American chemical industry one of the safest in employee health and safety of the manufacturing industries for which records are kept.

"This kind of record is only achieved by maintaining the highest possible standards at the plant level, which these Illinois companies have clearly demonstrated," said Roland. "Our industry salutes them."

A certificate of honor, for a year without injury of any kind, was awarded to Air Products and Chemicals Inc., Granite City Distribution Terminal, Granite City Facility, Operations Department, Process Systems Group.

The National Safety Council, which tracks the health and safety records of all major manufacturing industries in the United States, ranks the chemical industry among the nation's top three industries in workplace safety for employees.

In addition to company safety programs, the Chemical Manufacturers Association provides a number of special programs for the general public and for local community emergency response units. These include:

•Chemical Referral Center. By using a toll-free number (800-CMA-8200), anyone can obtain non-emergency information on chemicals of all kinds, including specific answers on hundreds of chemicals in everyday household use. The Center is open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. (EST) weekdays.

•Chemtrec. A long-established round-the-clock service providing immediate technical advice and assistance on dealing with hazardous materials to emergency response teams throughout the country.

•Chemnet. A network of over 250 trained emergency teams on call to assist local emergency units in any major incident involving hazardous materials.

•CAER. A CMA-sponsored program for coordination and training of all local response teams in case of emergencies in communities near chemical plants. CAER programs now exist in more than 1,100 communities.

Nikonov lauds Monsanto

A top-ranking Soviet official touring Monsanto Co. characterizes the relationship between the chemical company and the Soviet Union as "very special."

Viktor Nikonov, a member of the Politburo of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, toured the Monsanto Life Sciences Research Center in Chesterfield on Oct. 9. He was in the United States following an invitation from U.S. Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

Nikonov's eight-day agricultural tour included a meeting with President Ronald Reagan and stops at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, an Iowa farm and Disney World.

Speaking through an interpreter, Nikonov said he highly respects Monsanto products and the methods with which they are delivered to the international market. He said he hopes to see more trade between the two countries.

"Politics is always politics and business is always business. Of course, it pays when these two come together," Nikonov said.

Mankind is learning by difficult lessons, he said.

Scientists have spent 40 years creating weapons — "a self-destructive waste of millions of hours by very bright minds," Nikonov said. But that is in the past, he said.

Instead of nuclear physics, Nikonov said he favors the study of biotechnology — the science that strives to improve traits in plants.

Nikonov said too few Soviet products are purchased by the United States. When asked what products he would like to see Americans buy, Nikonov said he has a list of about 2,000 products that the Soviet Union is producing but which the United States does not have.

As examples, he cited juices for diabetics and sweeteners.

Small investors gain from drop

By Roger McGrath
Staff affiliate

Savvy St. Louis investors, in the wake of Wall Street's panic plunge, are stepping up to the counter and buying stocks, local analysts report.

"We've seen buying. People have their wish lists out," says Juli Niemann, director of equities research for R. Rowland & Co. "We're talking house of bar gains here."

The precipitous, across-the-board drop in stock prices, "is like a license to steal," says David Calhoun Jones Jr., president of St. Louis Investment Advisors Inc.

Alvery Bartlett, of Alvery Bartlett Brokerage Co., says the time to buy is now. "If you're a value-oriented investor, this is the time to buy value."

Savvy St. Louis investors are doing just that, they say.

"This is the only time the retail investor gets a big shot at big money," a chance to buy a stock at a bargain price, hold it three to five years, and then pocket a hefty profit, thanks to substantial price appreciation, Niemann says.

When the widely watched Dow Jones average was marching on 2,700, a level it topped in late August, institutional investors such as pension funds were fueling the market. "The guy on the street wasn't playing the game" because prices were too high, Bartlett says.

"Now, he's going to say, 'It's back to where I want to get in.' So the small investor will wade back into Wall Street, he adds.

"We are buyers at this level," he says.

So is Jones, an investment advisor to individuals and smaller institutional investors. "The fundamentals are still there," he says.

IBM, battered into a 31-point drop by Monday's (Oct. 19) market madness, "is the same company it was the day before," he explains.

Ditto for Anheuser-Busch Cos. and Jefferson Smurfit Corp., two local outfits with strong earnings gains predicted for this year and next. "With those kind of fundamentals, you buy the stock here" at the lower, after-the-fall prices, Jones says.

"It's like a license to steal," he says.

IBM and Busch posted price gains Tuesday. IBM advanced 11 to 115, Busch 5 to 31. Smurfit dropped 7% to 46.

"For the first time in a year-and-a-half, Americans can buy value, not fluff," Bartlett says.

"It's a wonderful time to be a buyer."

The Dow's 508-point drop of Monday brought Wall Street back into parity with interest rates, says the student of market history.

The last time long-term bonds yielded 10 1/2 percent, the Dow was at 1,500, Bartlett observes. By that measure, the stock market "was grossly overvalued."

The money freed by last week's free-fall selling moved into Treasury bills and the extra funds cut more than half a point off the 30-year yield, dropping it to 9.49 percent Tuesday.

Now the market, with the Dow under 1,800, may be oversold, Jones says. Bartlett says a snap back up to the 2,100 level wouldn't surprise him.

"Once the market settles down, there'll be some great opportunities there," says Mort Brown, research director for Edward D. Jones & Co.

The third- and fourth-quarter profit outlook remains strong, as do other economic indicators, Jones says. President Ronald Reagan echoed that sentiment Tuesday. "The economic fundamentals in this country remain sound."

Indeed, "there was no fundamental reason" for Monday's price plunge, Niemann says.

The fundamentals are not there for a crash," he adds. "There was a fear in the market that interest rates wouldn't come down."

Travelers Abroad members learn about Yugoslavia

Travelers Abroad held its first meeting of the season, with 16 members present. The program was about Yugoslavia.

President Elna Hoover conducted a business session, and members accepted the resignations of two officers. The Christmas party was discussed, and the president was asked to check on available dates.

Barbara Williams, in charge of the program, displayed pictures on poster board. She introduced Yugoslavia as a country with the Alps and the Mediterranean, plains and virgin timber, mosques and monasteries, and Greek and Roman ruins.

Most of the 22-member tour group she accompanied left from St. Louis and started their tour of Yugoslavia in its capital, Belgrade. A brief background of the country was presented, including the fact that it has a population of 22.5 million and is divided into six federal republics and two autonomous provinces.

A divided toll road is being built from Greece to Austria, and within five years the Middle East and middle Europe will be connected. Forty percent of this road goes through Yugoslavia.

Yugoslavia borders on seven countries — Albania, Greece, Italy, Hungary, Bulgaria, Austria and Romania.

Individuals own 80 percent of the land, but no foreigners can own land there. After 35 years of work, women can receive a pension; men receive a pension after 40 years. Education is free, including the universities. English is required of all students from the fifth through the ninth grades. Additional English is optional.

In Belgrade, the group visited Tito's mausoleum, known as the "House of Flowers." It is on a hilltop, surrounded by flowers, inside and out, and is made of white marble. Inside, guards stand at attention in 20-minute tours of duty at the four corners of his tomb. One enters the mausoleum in single file and views the tomb in silence from all four sides. As one walks along the red carpet, the only sounds are the rustling of clothing and the squeaking of shoes.

In Sarajevo, the group stayed at the Holiday Inn built for the 1984 Winter Olympics. They were shown the bridge where Garvito Princip assassinated the heir to the Austrian throne, which started World War I. In Yugoslavia, Princip is considered a hero because Yugoslavia won its freedom from Austria at the end of the war and became an independent country. The group visited the museum full of memorabilia to this event and learned the story from the Yugoslavian point of view.

Traveling from Sarajevo toward the Yugoslavian coast, the group encountered many tunnels — some quite long. The number of roads passing through the backbone of mountains that extends the full length — north to south — of the country is quite limited due to the number of tunnels that would have to be cut. At a short stop in Pocatitz, the group snacked on fresh, sugared figs that residents were selling.

The group lunched at Mostar, reputed to be the hottest town in the country, because it is surrounded on all four sides by mountains. They walked, and slid, across the Turkish bridge at Mostar. It is steep and was built in the 15th and 16th centuries. The stones are almost worn smooth, which makes the walking so dangerous.

Dubrovnik, with its walled "Old Town," and the area south of the city were toured for several days. The Old Town's walls are about 30 feet tall and from 13 to 20 feet thick on the land side, and from five to 10 feet thick on the sea side.

Other cities visited were Cavtat, Kotor, Zadar, Ljubljana and Bled. At Bled, only about 20 miles from the borders of Austria and Italy, the group went into the Julian Alps where they walked around in snow. Even though it was May, it snowed while the group was at the top of a one of the mountains.

A train and walking tour of the caves at Postojna and a two-day stay at the Plitvice National Park, with its 16 lakes connected with by waterfalls, was also included on the tour.

The tour ended in Zagreb, a city disturbed little by World War II.

The next meeting of the group will feature Margaret Lusk speaking on part of her European tour last summer.

Touring Miami is hardly a vice

By Tom and Joanne O'Toole
Journal correspondents

Few cities are as resilient as Miami.

It has seen boom and bust many times in less than 100 years. Miami has overcome hurricanes, epidemics, two major fires and inundations of Cuban and Caribbean refugees.

It has struggled against crime, drugs and language problems, but in spite of all that, Miami seems to be emerging a stronger, more vibrant international city.

Miami is a banking, trade and tourism hub. Within the last three years, the city has added 1,350 hotel rooms to accommodate business people, convention delegates and tourists. New hotels include the The Hotel Riverparc, Biscayne Bay Marriott and Intercontinental Hotel.

Tourist attractions include the MetroZoo, Miami Seaquarium and Seascap. Beyond these you'll find the Miami Serpentine, Monkey Jungle, Parrot Jungle, and Orchid Jungle. Twenty-five miles west of the city is the Miccosukee Indian Village.

Airlines cycle more than 20 million passengers a year through sprawling Miami International Airport. Miami International is the second busiest airport in the country for passenger traffic.

The Port of Miami is a major factor to the city's influx of tourists. According to the Metro-Dade Department of Tourism, 22 cruise ships use 11 berths in Miami's port. Expansion in the "cruise capital of the world" is an ongoing activity. A passenger bridge from the mainland, which opens this month, will give access to the port. Three ship berths will be in place by next summer.

These are some highlights:

Miami Beach beckons millions of vacationers every year. It's a long, slender expanse of white sand and the entire strip is generally called "the beach." At the end of Miami Beach city limits, unincorporated Surfside and Bal Harbour (locals call the area "motel row") provide a place for tourists to stay.

The Art Deco District is a reflection of the 1930s when the sandy beaches represented a dream vacation in the minds of most Americans. Today the art deco heritage is the only 20th century site on the National Register of Historic Places.

Coconut Grove, Miami's Greenwich Village, hugs the mainland along Biscayne Bay about 15 minutes south of downtown Miami, with ultra modern Brickell Avenue and Bayshore Drive its main corridor along the water, and Dixie Highway snaking along a few blocks inland.

NATIONAL CAR CARE MONTH

FALL CAR CARE '87

Thinking ahead can protect travelers

Put yourself in this driver's seat... you're driving your family home from a pleasant weekend out of town. The dark, overcast day turns into an even darker night, with the temperature hovering at about 30 degrees. What started as snow flurries turns into a raging blizzard 50 miles later.

Swirling, hard-driving snow has reduced visibility to only a few feet, drifts are beginning to form on the side of the highway, already trapping stopped motorists.

The road is slick, the snow is heavy and the wind is howling. What should you do—how should you react?

If you're not sure, you are not alone. In fact, most drivers have no idea how to react. But there are certain principles to follow that can reduce the danger to you and your passengers.

"After almost every severe winter storm, rescue teams find people who could have been saved, but avoided injury, if they only followed a few simple rules," said George Lazarus, commercial fleet specialist in the engineering division of Aetna Life & Casualty.

DEFENSIVE DRIVING TODAY

"There are two initial rules for travel during bad-weather seasons," Lazarus said. "First, listen to the radio or TV weather broadcasts not only for the immediate area, but for surrounding areas as well—what's happening where you are may be totally different from where you're going. If it seems too risky, don't go."

"Second, always keep your gas tank filled even if you're not planning a long trip—a little snow can cause massive traffic tie-ups. And if you get stuck in a traffic jam, you'll want to have enough gas to get through it."

But to get back to the original question: What if, while traveling, worst comes to worst and you do drive into a snowstorm? Lazarus said that if you think persisting in your journey will expose you and your family to significant danger, pull off the road and stop. In making your decision, consider road conditions and visibility. If you do stop, leave your car only if a safe haven is nearby, and you have the proper clothing for protection from frostbite.

It is easy to become disoriented in a driving snowstorm, and your chances of getting lost are high.

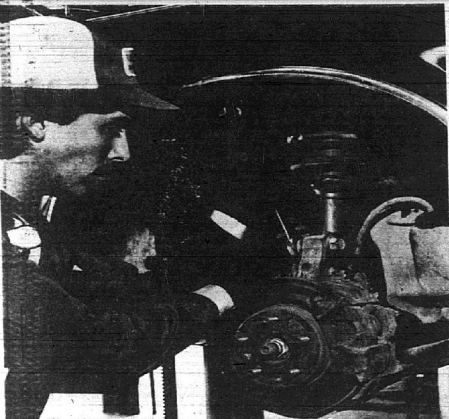

"You're better off staying in your car until the snow lets up, or help arrives," Lazarus said.

If you are stuck in your car, there are other tips to remember. Turn on your engine and heater for brief periods to warm up, but always leave a downwind window open a little to avoid a potentially deadly accumulation of carbon monoxide fumes. For the same reason, be sure your tailpipe is clear and not jammed with snow.

"It is also a good idea to leave the car's inside light, or flashers, on if you're stuck so rescuers can spot the car, even during the day."

Lazarus also suggests occasional exercise to stay warm. Stomping your feet or clapping your hands is useful, he added, "but don't become overexerted by trying to push or shovel your car out."

BY 1990, STUTS will be used on nearly half of the passengers cars, say ride control experts at Monroe Auto Equipment Co. Unlike conventional tube-type shock absorbers, a strut—often referred to as a MacPherson strut—is a load-bearing structural suspension unit with a shock absorber inside and usually a coil spring wrapped around the outside.

More automobiles now 'strutting their stuff'

Both domestic and foreign cars today are strutting their stuff when it comes to the suspension system. Replacing the traditional type of shock absorbers, many of the new cars, the strut type is lighter and takes up less room under the hood.

By 1990, nearly 50 percent of passenger cars will use struts, according to Monroe Auto Equipment Co., a producer of automotive suspensions. Most rear suspensions, however, will still use the traditional shock absorbers. A strut is a load-bearing structural suspension unit with a shock absorber inside and usually a coil spring wrapped around the outside. Both serve as dampers to reduce vibration and provide a smoother ride, but a strut also carries the vehicle's weight.

While some struts have replaceable shock absorber cartridges inside, many of the new domestic strut-equipped vehicles have struts that are sealed for life and must be replaced as a unit.

"The best way to determine whether or not a car's struts or shock absorbers are serviceable is to have the vehicle inspected on a lift by a professional mechanic," Car Care Council says. A visual examination of the parts, along with their mechanical integrity, will help determine the need for replacement.

It is a good idea to have the struts and shocks checked when the car's odometer reaches 25,000 miles, according to Monroe. Unlike an exhaust system, which loudly and clearly lets you know when it has failed, shock absorbers wear out gradually. When operating at their peak, struts or shocks can severely compromise ride and handling.

How do you know when your struts are worn out and need replacing?

The signs are the same as for conventional shocks. Look for excessive or uneven tire wear, a "cupping" on the tire tread. Oil leaks in the struts or shocks are also possible. If the car's ride is getting too bouncy, even on smooth surfaces, the units may be worn out.

Also notice how the car behaves in turns. A sloppy or soft feeling can mean worn shocks, which result in a loss of control when cornering. If the shocks when you come to a stop, that is a sure sign the shocks or struts need replacing. A shimmy in the steering wheel might mean misalignment, but also can be related to loose bolts or a worn upper bearing.

Strut replacement will be more costly than putting new shocks on the car, due to the increased labor needed for this more complex job, Monroe says. But, the company adds, the benefit of better braking and improved ride and handling will make it worthwhile.

Shock absorbers and struts should be replaced in pairs. Car Care Council points out. If the car originally was equipped with the new gas-filled shocks, be sure to replace them with units of the same type.

Today's Cars Need 4-Wheel Alignment

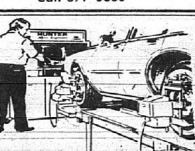

Today's smaller, light-weight, front-wheel drive cars need all four wheels checked to insure proper performance.

Our new computerized Total Alignment system is specially designed to meet today's complex alignment needs. We'll check and adjust the alignment angles of each wheel, front and back, to meet manufacturer's specifications. Total Alignment then relates all four wheels to a common centerline to give you precise handling and a smooth ride.

Get a better ride, longer tire life, improved handling, better gas mileage, and insure safe driving. Bring the pleasure back to driving... and save money, too.

TIRE ROTATION PREFERRED PATTERNS

Rear and 4-Wheel Drive Vehicles

Front Wheel Drive Vehicles

Source: Tire Industry Safety Council

Tire rotation differs for front, rear drive

"Let it snow," say the owners of front-wheel-drive cars who can enjoy plowing through winter with ease. The concentration of the engine and transmission's weight over the driving wheels greatly improves traction.

However, this feature does put a disproportionate load on the car's front tires, which not only steer and drive the car but also carry extra braking burden plus most of the weight. Front tires may wear twice as fast as rear, which is why most manufacturers emphasize the importance of periodic tire rotation (crisscrossing of tires) on front-drive vehicles.

For optimum wear, tires should be rotated about every 6,000 to 8,000 miles. Car Care Council says. Look for unusual tread wear patterns, sometimes signalled by a thumped sound or excessive tire noise on smooth roads. Such conditions may have been caused by incorrect wheel alignment, worn suspension parts or incorrect inflation. Rotating tires will help but may camouflage the real trouble, which should be corrected in the interests not only of longer tire wear but safe steering control.

Recommended rotation pattern on front-wheel-drive vehicles is to move the two front tires to the rear, same side, then the rear tires to the opposite sides on the front. The spare can be included in the rotation on cars with conventional spare tires. (See diagram.)

If tires are wearing evenly, why not leave them be until the front (or driving) tires are worn out? There are two good reasons, the council says. First, a car handles better when tire tread patterns are evenly worn. Also, if the tires are allowed to wear out at the same rate, the new set of tires at replacement time may be of upgraded technology, giving the car the benefit of improved ride and handling. Further, it may be possible to buy a set of four more economically than two pairs at different times.

When rotating tires, be sure to check and adjust inflation. On some cars there will be a difference between recommended inflation of front versus rear. Also, if alignment and/or balancing has not been done in a year or so, this might be the most convenient time to do so.

What should be blamed when car heater fails?

With the winter months ahead, now is the time to make sure your vehicle's heater is working properly.

A car's heating system is much like the engine cooling system. In addition to the duct work, the basic elements of any car heating system are: the heater core, which in essence is a miniature radiator, and two hoses, one of which transports hot coolant to the heater core in the passenger compartment, while the second hose returns this coolant to the engine.

To help familiarize you with some possible heating system problems, The Gates Rubber Co. has developed this troubleshooting guide.

When your car heater is not producing enough heat, any of the following may be the cause:

•The flow of air under the dash may be blocked.

•Coolant level in the radiator may be low.

•Heater hoses may be leaking.

If a leak is the problem, the hoses must be replaced.

•Hoses may be bent or kinked, thereby restricting the flow of coolant.

•If the car's heater hoses have been removed recently, they may not have been reconnected properly.

•Air may be trapped in the system. This also would restrict the coolant. The solution to this is to bleed the system.

•The blower motor may not be working properly. This could be caused by a blown fuse, a faulty blower resistor, a bad blower motor switch, a loose connection or a burned-out motor.

•The cooling system thermostat may be stuck in the open position. When this happens, the coolant will not heat up properly. And, if the coolant is too cold, heat output will be insufficient. The thermostat should be removed, tested, and replaced if necessary.

•Doors to the heater assembly may be stuck.

•The heater core may be clogged. If this is the case, the core should be removed from the car and cleaned out. If the problem still exists, the heater core should be replaced.

•The water pump belt may be worn and need replacing. If the pump belt has become loose due to wear, it will not drive the water pump efficiently. This, in turn, means that the cooling system will not operate efficiently.

Recharging more effective with proper battery upkeep

You've left your lights on and the battery has run down. A neighbor with booster cables comes to your rescue and the engine soon comes to life.

Late for your appointment, you gamble that after a 15-minute drive the battery will have recharged enough to get you started later. No time now to stop at a service station to get the battery fully charged.

How can you know whether you're pressing your luck too far?

Several factors constitute "luck" in this situation, says Larry Koles, Champion Spark Plug Co. service expert. These include the condition of the charging circuit, ignition and fuel systems, as well as the battery and battery cables.

Outside temperature is important, too. In cold weather, the oil thickens and places a greater burden on the starter. Cold weather also weakens the battery.

A charging system in good condition should bring a standard battery to starting strength after about 15 minutes of conventional driving, Koles said. This still doesn't assure you of a "sure start" because that also depends on the engine's need for a tune-up and whether the battery is young enough to hold a charge.

It also assumes the battery cables and connections are in good condition.

Symptoms of loose or corroded battery cables are about the same as those of a weak battery. Clean, secure contacts at the battery terminals and at the ground connection are essential to dependable starting, even with a fully charged battery, Koles says.

the water along to the nearest vertical piping, hitting it with force, and causing a "water hammer."

Your heating contractor may be able to locate the source of the trouble, and adjust the piping to eliminate the problem.

If there is a knocking noise in the pipes, it is caused by water that shouldn't be there. When steam in a system condenses into water, it is supposed to find its way back to the boiler. If some part of the horizontal piping has drooped to form a low point, that condensate water will lie there, until the next time the steam comes up. When the steam hits that puddle, it drives the water along to the nearest vertical piping, hitting it with force, and causing a "water hammer."

Bright color, mellow flavor make pumpkin fall favorite

It is easy to like pumpkins. Their bright autumn colors, their variety of shapes and sizes, and their many culinary and non-culinary uses make them a fall favorite around the country. Pumpkins were the dietary staple of early English settlers in America and were credited with keeping them from starving during their first winters.

Pumpkins also can be nutritionally important today. They are an excellent source of vitamin A in the form of beta-carotene, a nutrient that has been associated with lower cancer risk.

While pumpkin usually is seen as the basis for a variety of desserts, such as the traditional pie and many other types of baked goods, in countries outside the United States pumpkin plays an important role as a vegetable, often used in casseroles.

When selecting a pumpkin for cooking, look for one well-matured, with a rich orange color. Avoid pumpkins that are broken, cracked, excessively scarred or show signs of soft rot. Smaller pumpkins tend to be better for cooking, offering a finer texture.

To prepare a fresh pumpkin for use in baked goods or Spiced Pumpkin Frozen Yogurt, quarter the pumpkin and cut off the rind. Remove seeds and stringy portions. Cut pumpkin flesh in 1 1/2- to 2-inch pieces. Steaming the pumpkin 15 to 20 minutes, covered, over one inch of boiling water is a cooking method which protects many of the pumpkin's nutrients.

Pumpkin also can be boiled in a large pot of water 8 to 12 minutes. Microwaving is another fast cooking method which helps preserve nutrients. Place a small pumpkin in a covered dish. Do not add water. Microwave on high about 8 minutes.

A five-pound pumpkin will yield about 5 cups of cooked pumpkin. Canned pumpkin purée, nutritionally equal to fresh pumpkin, also may be used in recipes, but canned pumpkin pie filling, as opposed to canned puree, usually has sweeteners added, thus adding extra calories, too. Any extra pumpkin, canned or cooked, easily freezes and can be stored up to six months.

Spiced Pumpkin Frozen Yogurt is for pumpkin pie lovers who yearn for something different and lower in fat. The traditional spicy-yet-sweet flavor of this refreshing dessert will make it a new holiday tradition.

Spiced pumpkin frozen yogurt

- 2 cups plain low-fat yogurt
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1 cup pumpkin puree, canned or fresh
- 1 1/2 tsp. cinnamon
- 1 1/2 tsp. nutmeg, preferably freshly grated

Pour yogurt, sugar, pumpkin, cinnamon and nutmeg into canister of ice cream maker. Freeze according to manufacturer's directions. If storing in freezer, soften 10 minutes in the refrigerator before serving.

Note: This also can be made by pouring the mixture into covered shallow pan, placing it in the freezer and stirring every half hour until frozen.

Yields 6 servings, each with 1 gm. fat and about 146 calories.

The American Institute for Cancer Research, Washington, D.C., provides this information. Registered dietitian Karen Collins reviews the recipe.

Caramel sauce greets goblins

Hardly a trick-or-treater, young or old, does not like popcorn balls. These Caramel Peanut Popcorn Balls are fun to make as well as fun to eat. Just unwrap about 28 caramels and place in a small bowl. Add 2 tablespoons water. Place in microwave oven. Cook on highest setting 1 1/2 to 2 minutes.

At the end of this time it will not look completely melted. Remember how the caramels were melted conventionally on top of a stove, they would be stirred constantly so that they would not burn or scorch because all the heat and cooking is on the bottom. In a microwave oven, however, microwaves penetrate from all sides, so the cooking is from the top, sides and bottom.

This eliminates the constant stirring that is necessary conventionally. Consequently, when food is removed that just has been melted by a microwave, it often retains its original shape and just appears softer. This means that the final step in any melting should be stirring.

So, when the caramel mixture is removed from the microwave, stir until the caramels are smooth and creamy. If all of them are not completely melted after stirring, just return the mixture to the microwave oven another 30 seconds.

This creamy caramel sauce is now ready to pour over a combination of 2 quarts popped corn and 1 cup salted peanuts. Toss the mixture until well coated. Using buttered hands, shape handfuls of the mixture into balls. Let them stand until firm.

This quantity makes about 12 to 15 delicious Caramel Peanut Popcorn Balls.

Caramel Apples are another Halloween favorite. Prepare the caramel sauce as directed above. Put sticks into washed and dried apples, then dip the apples into the caramel sauce. Roll in chopped peanuts, if desired, and place on waxed paper until firm. After all this there is no caramel-sticky, burnt-on pain to soak and scrub.

When trick-or-treaters return from their outing, give them something warm and delicious to sip. Adults love Hot Spiced Cider, too. Pour apple cider into a microwave-safe pitcher that fits into a microwave oven. Add 2 pieces of stick cinnamon, about a teaspoon of whole cloves and 1/2 teaspoon whole allspice. Cook this mixture on the highest setting until it is boiling. This usually takes two to three minutes for each cup of liquid, so a 6-cup pitcher of cider after it begins to boil will take 12 to 15 minutes, reducing the power level to 50 percent to keep it from boiling all over the microwave oven. Cook an additional 5 minutes to let flavors blend.

IEPA wants statewide sewage problem solved by July 1988

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has reported that more than 200 municipalities in the state aren't operating their wastewater treatment plants within federal and state pollution control standards.

The agency said these communities may face extensive fines or other penalties if sewage problems are not corrected by July 1, 1988.

The deadline for communities to solve sewage problems has been mandated by Congress under the federal Clean Water Act and applies to municipalities in all states.

The goals of the Clean Water Act are achieved, in part, through the issuance of permits to communities that discharge wastewater. These permits establish the limitations that must be set before treated sewage can be discharged into the nation's lakes, rivers and streams.

The IEPA reports that 226 municipal sewage treatment plants in the state are not operating in compliance with their permit limits. These communities could face fines if their treatment facilities are not operating correctly by next year's deadline.

The deadline isn't the first imposed by Washington, but IEPA officials said it looks like federal officials are going to stick with this date.

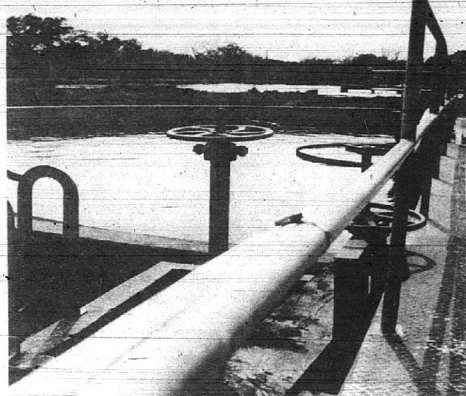

The American Public Works Association, a national organization which represents the nation's public works officials, reports that because of the growing complexity of federal and state standards mandated under the Clean Water Act, thousands of facilities—already built or under construction in the U.S.—are posing major technical problems for municipalities.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has found that the highly technical nature and rapidly increasing number of new and updated treatment facilities has resulted in communities not always finding the qualified personnel necessary to make the plants work the way they were designed.

A key factor in compliance problems at many plants, the agency stated, is that operators—although usually certified by the state—often lack the technical knowledge and management skills needed to properly operate, maintain and manage these facilities.

Since 1982, the EPA has funded and directed state water quality agencies to provide on-site technical and financial management assistance to many localities that have problems operating their sewage treatment plants.

A national organization, the National Environment Training

Wastewater plants in trouble

Association (NETA), was formed several years ago to specifically provide training to plant operators.

Additionally, an increasing number of Illinois communities are turning over the day-to-day operation of their treatment facilities to private firms that specialize in running municipal plants. These communities have hired companies to manage and run their plants under contract operation and maintenance agreements.

For example, Professional Services Group Inc. (PSG), a private firm based in Jenkintown, Pa., operates wastewater treatment plants for the Illinois communities of Geneseo, Kewanee, and Peru, as well as various other municipal plants in 10 other states.

Under a contract operation and maintenance agreement, the municipality still owns the plant and equipment, but the private firm hires the city plant employees and takes complete responsibility for the facility, its efficient quality, and any fines that the

Hotline to help police check on Halloween candy

Halloween safety recommendations and a nationwide Halloween safety plan have been announced by Illinois State Police Director Jeremy Margolis.

Margolis said, "State, county and municipal police departments nationwide have been provided with a toll-free telephone hotline to the confectionery industry. The purpose of the hotline is to assist police in determining if the reporting of candy-tampering incidents is factual and to respond to those incidents immediately and effectively."

He said, "Working with the confectionery industry also is intended to prevent unnecessary public alarm over common and harmless occurrences that can happen in the manufacturing process.

"Two examples of harmless and common occurrences have been given by the confectionery industry as reporting of glass in a piece of candy, being nothing more than crystal sugar, and a complaint of white powder as possibly being starch from a candy filling."

"Those having a question or complaint about candy, or other items collected by children, are being encouraged to report those concerns to the police."

Other Halloween safety recommendations are: wearing light-colored clothing, short enough to prevent tripping, with added reflectors; making sure children can see through face masks; accompanying children as they visit the neighborhood; going out in daylight and carrying a flashlight in case of delay; staying within the neighborhood and only visiting homes you know; watching for traffic; only giving and accepting wrapped or packaged candy; and examining candy before allowing it to be eaten.

Lawmakers praise attack

By David Rocks

P-RJ Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Most Illinois lawmakers announced support last Monday for the U.S. Navy's retaliatory attack against two Iranian sea platforms, but some said the incident pointed out the need for congressional consent for continued American involvement in the Persian Gulf.

The Oct. 19 strike, in response to an Iranian attack Oct. 16 on an American-flagged Kuwaiti tanker, destroyed two former oil drilling facilities that a presidential spokesman said had been "used to assist in a number of attacks on non-belligerent shipping."

"The attack on the Iranian oil platforms was a proper response to the unprovoked attacks on U.S. interests in the gulf," Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., said.

"I believe the administration has given a restrained answer to the Iranian leadership, indicating to them that we will not allow the Iranian military and Revolutionary Guard to attack U.S. ships in the Persian Gulf," Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., while supporting President Reagan's decision to attack the platform, said Congress should be consulted about further actions in the Gulf under the 1973 War Powers Act.

The law calls for the president to inform Congress within 48 hours of any military action and to withdraw the troops within 60 days if lawmakers do not declare war or approve further involvement.

"Destruction of the platforms seems to be a measured response," Simon said in a statement released in Washington. "But this clear exchange of hostilities is added cause for invoking the War Powers Act." Simon is one of 115 Democratic lawmakers who have filed suit against President Reagan in federal district court seeking to invoke the War Powers Act. Senators were scheduled to consider a watered-down version of the law that would require the President to report to Congress on U.S. involvement in the Gulf within 60 days.

Simon also said he would like other nations to help bear the burden of keeping the Gulf's shipping lanes open.

Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., also a plaintiff in the suit, echoed Simon's calls for congressional consent to U.S. involvement in the Gulf.

"Now more than ever the President should follow the law of the War Powers Act and make sure the people are behind him and that Congress supports him," Durbin said. "We also shouldn't let it get in the way of U.N.-sponsored efforts to negotiate a settlement to the war."

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., one of several congressional leaders who consulted with Reagan Sunday night before the strike, said the attack should not be seen as a move by the United States to assist Iraq in its war with Iran.

"The Iraqis would probably like to see the United States in the war with Iran, but we're not about to fall into that trap," he said.

Michel defended the decision to destroy the platforms rather than the Silkworm missiles blamed for the attack on the refueled tanker Sea Isle City. The missile strike blinded the ship's American captain and wounded 17 other crew members.

"Silkworms can be hidden like your Christmas presents from your child," Michel said. "If you're going to attack Silkworms, you're going to engage in carpet bombing over an extensive land mass."

Firefighters' training to bring college credit

SPRINGFIELD — A new agreement will enable Illinois firefighters to earn college credit while gaining professional certification, the Office of the State Fire Marshal (OSFM) has announced.

"The Illinois Fire Science Articulation Agreement is the result of three years' study," Glenna J. Senger, deputy state fire marshal for personnel standards and education, said.

"It's the result of a joint effort of the fire services, the community colleges and OSFM to offer standardized and quality delivery of fire science courses in Illinois."

The agreement was signed by the Illinois Community College Board, Illinois Fire Chiefs Association, University of Illinois Fire Service Institute and OSFM.

In the past, professional firefighter certification could be achieved over an extended period at various non-educational agencies and institutions but not with college credit.

Senger said that "achievement of both firefighter certification and college credit is now available through other agencies and institutions."

Health care

Hearing-aid providers certified

By Bernard J. Turnock

M.D., Director of Illinois Department of Public Health

As technology advances, devices that improve the quality of our lives become more efficient, more sophisticated, more desirable and more available.

Hearing aids are a good example. For many people, the appropriate hearing aid is so small it is hardly noticeable when inserted into the ear. At the same time, it performs better than hearing aids of a generation ago.

These improvements have made hearing aids so attractive that more people with impaired hearing are now willing to use them.

The increased popularity and availability of hearing aids has proven beneficial to many hearing-impaired persons, their families and their friends.

To ensure that those who want hearing aids are protected from the occasional unscrupulous or dishonest hearing-aid provider, the State Health Department certifies those who dispense hearing aids in Illinois.

A hearing-aid provider or dispenser must pass a comprehensive written examination to be eligible for certification. His certificate should be prominently displayed in his place of business.

When you visit a hearing-aid provider, look for the certificate. If it is not on display, ask to see it. If you believe you need a hearing aid, the first person you should see is your physician.

Do not visit a hearing-aid dispenser until you have seen your physician and followed his instructions.

Your doctor may refer you to an audiologist for an exact diagnosis of your hearing problem. The report from the audiologist will enable the hearing-aid dispenser to provide you with the proper type of hearing aid for your particular problem.

Just as all kinds of hearing loss are not from the same cause, neither can all types of hearing loss be helped by the same kind of hearing aid.

The dispenser must know just what is causing your hearing loss before he can provide you with the hearing aid which will be of greatest benefit to you.

To assist Illinoisans who are considering the purchase of hearing aids, the State Health Department has established a Hearing Aid Information Line. Consumers who have questions about hearing aids are encouraged to call the Information Line.

Those who have complaints about hearing aids they have already purchased or about providers of hearing aids are also encouraged to call.

The toll-free number, voice or TDD, is 800-572-3270.

Ask the dietitian

Dear Dietitian:

How can I make meal time more interesting for my three-year-old? He hardly eats anything.

Dear Concerned Mother: The most important thing to remember is that your child is an individual and that his rate of growth, health, and activity will determine how much is eaten.

Aim to make mealtime happy. Avoid forcing your child to eat. Set a time limit, about 30 minutes, and when the time is up, remove the food.

Children learn by example. If you have many food dislikes, you cannot expect them to eat differently.

Sometimes children are more interested in eating if they are able to help by setting the table or by actually preparing the food.

My four-year and five-year-old boys love to play "waiter." They each have their own special tray on which they carry silverware, cups, margarine and salads to the table.

They are able to calm down and make an easier transition from play time to meal time. A child who is overtired seldom eats well.

Children enjoy finger foods. When they can feed themselves, they gain confidence. Good choices are meats cut in bite-size portions, cut-up fresh fruits, raisins, raw vegetable slices, cheese, and small sandwich pieces.

Children also like brightly colored foods, such as watermelon, green peas, red apples, oranges, and carrot sticks.

They especially like mild foods - custard, puddings, bananas, cereal and apple sauce. Try to avoid heavily seasoned foods and tough meats.

My boys love to make "face food." Sometimes we take open-faced peanut butter sandwiches and put banana pieces on to form the eyes, nose, mouth and even ears. At other times a mound of mashed potatoes may grow shredded cheese hair and have two green pea eyes.

SIUUE faculty pay higher than most

SPRINGFIELD — The average faculty salaries for Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville were higher than at most other Illinois state universities last year, according to a new survey.

Lewis and Clark Community College and Blackburn and Principia faculty salaries were about in the middle for their types of institutions, said the State Board of Higher Education staff report.

For all faculty ranks at SIUE, the average salary was $34,200 for the year ending in June. That was about the same as at SIU at Carbondale and higher than the five Board of Governors universities and three Board of Regents schools. It was well below the $45,100 average for the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana and $39,300 for the UI at Chicago. The lowest average was $28,900 at Chicago State.

SIUE was also the only state university in which women (full) professors had an average salary higher than their male counterparts, $39,500 compared to $37,100. However, below the full professor rank, men had the pay advantage.

Overall, salaries at Illinois public universities were, on average, 5.9 percent below the means for comparative institutions nationally, the BHE staff said. The University of Illinois faculty salary average was third highest among the Big Ten schools.

The average faculty salary for this past academic year at Lewis & Clark Community College in Godfrey was $28,800. Eighteen other community colleges had higher average salaries and 20 had lower. Belleville Area College was one of the highest, at $34,600.

Competition hot for Olympic tickets

By Deborah Reinhardt
Staff affiliate

In Calgary, the site of the XV Winter Olympic games (Feb. 13 through 28, 1988), Canadians are in an uproar about a ticket snafu. It seems Olympic sponsors amassed quite a few tickets to popular events before tickets were offered to the public.

Frank King, chairman for the Calgary Olympic Organizing Committee, told "Travel-Holiday" magazine that the public should realize that these corporate sponsors make the games possible.

True enough, but what about people who wholedly follow and support pre-Olympic events? Certainly, they deserve to see the culmination of years of training and anticipation.

So the Calgary Olympic Organizing Committee commenced a few sponsors to purchase some of the tickets. The committee also increased the number of seats in the Saddledome arena by 2,600 and McMahon Stadium by 9,700 seats.

A ticket update showed hockey games, figure skating, speed skating and curling events were sold out. Opening and closing ceremonies are wrapped up, too. Those tickets were gone last October.

But tickets are available for bobsled, ski jump, luge, Alpine ski and cross-country ski events. To obtain a ticket ordering form, write to Olympic Tickets, P.O. Box 1988, Station M, Calgary, Alberta, Canada T2P 4E7. An expedient way to order tickets would be calling the ticket office, if you don't mind paying long-distance charges. The number is (403) 270-0088.

Suppose you get tickets to an event. Will you have a place to stay in Calgary?

The Olympic Housing Bureau said hotel and motel space in the city is filled to capacity. Visitors can stay with families in their private homes, or the bureau can book a hotel or motel room 100 to 150 miles outside of Calgary.

Reservations will not be taken by phone until November. Prior to that, accommodation reservation forms will be sent by mail with event ticket confirmation.

Contact the Olympic Housing Bureau, P.O. Box 4600, Station C, Calgary, Alberta, Canada, T2T 5W1. The phone number is (403) 262-6630.

The Olympics is the big event for Calgary, but they will be preceded by the Olympic Arts Festival.

Calgary will be the site of the visual, literary and performing arts celebration in January. The Calgary Center for Performing Arts, downtown, will welcome most of the theatrical, dance and musical events. Glenbow Museum will be the host of an exhibit of Indian art, "The Spirit Thing," Jan. 14 through April 30. History buffs can visit Fort Calgary, at the confluence of the Bow and Elbow rivers. The original fort was built in 1875. An Interpretive Center has audio-visual presentations, artifacts and model exhibits. The Discovery Room is the place to try on Mountie uniforms and buffalo coats.

Fort Calgary is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and admission is free.

Those seeking higher culture will want to know that one of the city's six major museums, Glenbow Museum, is in the Calgary Convention Center. In addition to presenting special exhibits, like "The Spirit Thing," Glenbow also has an extensive collection of artifacts pertaining to the history of western Canada.

Science fans can visit Calgary's Science Center and Planetarium. Exhibits and shows run daily. Hours for the center are 1 to 9 p.m. Show admission is about $4 in Canadian money (about $3.10) for adults, $2 ($1.55) for children, $1 (77 cents) for senior adults. Tickets to laser shows are $5 each.

Parade to begin holiday season

A downtown St. Louis parade will kick off the Christmas season at 5 p.m. Nov. 28, said committee members of Christmas in St. Louis.

Parade chairman Nick Kurten said this year's event will be bigger than last year's premiere parade. Volunteers are estimating that between 75,000 to 100,000 people will attend the parade.

"We have charted a little longer route in order to view the colored lights," Kurten said.

Units expected to participate in the parade include the Anheuser-Busch Clydesdales.

The parade, which will last about an hour, will begin at Olive Street and Tucker Boulevard (12th Street), proceed east on Olive to Seventh Street, north on Seventh to Locust Street, west on Locust to 14th Street and finish at 14th and Chestnut streets.

Captains bring Warriors back from near death

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — When the Warriors chose team captains at the beginning of the year, they were looking for people who could lead them through the tough times.

They obviously made the right choice. If the soccer team ends up going to the state tournament, they will have to think back to Oct. 26 and realize how close they came to having their season end in the very first regional game, a game they pulled out 2-1 in overtime from Alton.

As the clock at the Gauntlet ticked inside of eight minutes, the Warriors trailed the lowly Redbirds 1-0.

But that's when the three captains stepped forward. Fullback Jeff Grote moved up to the front line and played tremendously hard despite an ankle injury in the third quarter. He forced a penalty kick when two Redbird defenders pulled him down in the penalty area with 7:37 remaining. Captain Mike Lane converted the penalty kick to tie the game.

The Warriors forced the action for the rest of the game an into overtime. The first five minutes period went by without any scoring, but then Captain Kirk Mills converted a centering pass from Troy Adamitis seconds into the second overtime and the Warriors hung on for the win.

"I'm still trying to come around," said Warrior coach Gene Baker, who must have seen the season flashing before his eyes late in regulation time. "Give Alton all the credit. They played with enthusiasm and bunched up the middle after their goal. But our captains came through for us."

What an upset it would have been as the Warriors are now 14-3-2 while Alton finished at 4-15-2. Redbird coach Joe Gentlin was pleased with his team's effort, but wondered what might have been.

"We handled the play much better tonight, but it was an unfortunate call to give them a penalty kick in the last seven minutes of the game," he said. "We came to play hard but the caliber of officiating is in question."

The Warriors forced the play for most of the windy, misty night, but it was the Redbirds who scored the only goal of the first half on a quick strike. They cleared the ball quickly and Allen Groves passed to Jim Johnson on the left side and his left-footer beat Mark Krovich to the bottom right corner at 37:52.

That left the Redbirds fired up but the Warriors had the ball in Alton territory for almost the entire second half. Herb Heaton had a high shot stopped by Alton keeper Mark Haynes before Kirk Pyle chipped a point blank shot over the goal with 10 minutes left. Then Grote drew the foul that led to Lane's penalty kick into the right corner at 72:23.

"We played very well in regulation, but once they tied the game we lost our momentum and I didn't have a good feeling about the outcome," Gentlin said.

The Redbirds got a bad break when Haynes was smashed into the goal post on a scramble early in the second overtime. He had to come out until the next stoppage of play and was replaced by Terry Embry. Unfortunately for Alton, the next stoppage came when Adamitis ran down the left wing and centered one to Mills who tapped it in for his fifth of the year and his second overtime game-winner.

"I don't think having our goal tie hurt on that goal," Gentlin said. (See SOCCER, Page 20)

Unpredictable Stars top Lincoln

By Gary King
Correspondent

If there's one thing predictable about the Granite City Campus Stars, it's their unpredictability. Several times this fall, Stars coach Larry Petri has watched the same 11 players produce completely unfamiliar results within a span of 24 hours.

Petri was treated to yet another dose of bitterness this weekend as his Stars turned in a pair of performances that would make Dr. Jekyll/Mr. Hyde seem stable.

After suffering a 2-0 white-washing at the hands of Sauk Valley on Friday, GCC did a 180-degree turn on Saturday to trounce Lincoln College, 4-0.

The whole chain of events left Petri just shaking his head.

"Hopefully, this is an encouraging sign," Petri said. "I think this win was something we definitely needed. We played well today."

Which, incidentally, were his thoughts on Friday's game, also. "We dominated Sauk Valley, I thought," Petri said. "But they scored two quickies in the first half and that was the game. We had five or six chances, but we just couldn't push it in."

But on Saturday, a normally gun-shy Dave Stosberg, who entered the contest with only one goal to his credit on the season, transformed into GCC's Top Gun.

Stosberg's two goals doubled his scoring output for the season and provided the Stars all the boost they needed to raise their record to 9-9-2.

After forward Tom Bufo got the GCC offense rolling with a goal midway through the first half, Stosberg picked up the second goal of the game on a crossing pass from Phil Heli, giving the Stars a 2-0 halftime lead.

Todd Jones, all but iced the win for GCC with 14:44 remaining when he beat Lincoln goalie Steve Buntrock from short range to take a 3-0 lead.

Stosberg snuck his second goal of the game past Buntrock with CLINT TUCKER, a 1987 graduate of Collinsville High School and a member of the Kahoks' 1986 state champions, controls the ball for Sauk Valley as GCC's Tom Bufo moves in during Friday's game. Sauk Valley, coached by Granite City native Ron Rowden, has GCHS graduates Greg Bailey, Tom Doak, Darin Duffin, Rich Nelson, Jason Smith and Bruce Winfield on the team.

A little more than two minutes left to give GCC its final margin of victory.

Petri pointed to Stosberg and Bufo as keys to the win. "Stosberg doubled his goal output today, so hopefully that's the start of a good trend for him," Petri said. "And Bufo was also a main cog out there today."

Unless Petri can schedule a practice game sometime this week, the Stars will be idle until Saturday, when they are to face Midwest Community College Athletic Conference rival East Central College in their final regular season game.

The game is scheduled for 1 p.m. at GCC.

Petri hopes Saturday's performance was more than just a fleeting spark.

"We needed this win for our regional record, and I think we might see these guys (Lincoln) again in the playoffs," Petri said. "Now we've got to gear up for our last game and then start thinking regionals."

Warrior runners blanked in cross country regional as Lincoln Tigers win big East St. Louis Lincoln was the big winner in the IHSAA Class AA cross-country regional at Edwardsville on Saturday.

Lincoln took team titles in both the boys and girls races while Granite City had no runners advance to this Saturday's sectional at Springfield. The Warriors did not field a full team in the girls race and finished 12th in the boys race with 258 points.

Lincoln won the boys race with 70 points although Belleville West's John Blassingame won the run with a time of 15:43 in the three-mile race. Wally Gregory of Civic Memorial was next, then Lonnie Lucas and Michael Holmes of the Tigers were third and fourth, respectively.

Belleville West was second with 74 points. Other qualifying teams were East St. Louis (107) and Alton (116). Individual qualifiers not from those teams included Gregory, Fallon Overmeyer (CM, sixth, 16:19), Tom Mueth (Mascoutah, eighth, 16:28), Stefan Hornberger (Edwardsville, 10th, 16:32) and Joe Rios (Collinsville, 16:38).

In the girls race, the Lincoln Tigerettes took the first four places and sixth place to score an easy win with an almost perfect 16 points. Sarah Fleming was tops on the two-mile course in 12:28. She was followed by teammates Erica Eastern (12:36), Monrice Granberry (12:47) and Fatima Snelling (13:10). Julia Zobrist of Triad took fifth in 13:13 and Dawn Reed of Lincoln was next at 13:22.

Triad (59 points), O'Fallon (108) and Belleville East (141) also qualified teams for the sectional. Other individual qualifiers were Stephanie Birchler (Sparta, eighth, 13:26), Tammy Hawkins (Valmeyer, 14:22), Erin Sears (Belleville West, 14:36), Kristin Hawkins (Valmeyer, 14:38) and Kathy Bacu (Mascoutah, 14:42).

The Tigerettes had seven of the top 10 finishers.

Cardinals' seventh-game magic wearing thin

As one of the proudest franchises in baseball, the Cardinals could long point to their phenomenal success in seventh games. It used to be if you wanted to beat the Cardinals in a World Series, you had better take care of them in six games or less. In their first 11 appearances in the fall classic, the Cardinals had gone to the limit six times. On all six occasions they were victorious.

But now the Cardinals have gone down to defeat in three of their last four seventh games, not including the seventh-game win over the Giants in this year's National League Championship Series. The 1987 World Series marked the seventh straight Series the Cardinals have been involved in that has gone to the limit. The Cardinals once owned that seventh game.

1995: The heroes of Rogers Hornsby, Tom Thoen, Jim Bottomley and Jesse Haines guided the Cardinals to the final game at Yankee Stadium. With a precarious 3-2 lead, player-manager Hornsby called in legendary hurler Grover Cleveland Alexander to relieve Haines in the seventh inning. Ol' Pete was at the end of an illustrious career and legend has it he had celebrated his sixth-game victory a little too hard the night before.

Sports Comment
By Dave Whaley

But he fanned Yankee slugger Tony Lazzeri with the bases loaded to end the seventh and allowed only a two-out walk to Babe Ruth in the ninth. Ruth tried to steal second and was gunned down by catcher Bob O'Rearrell to give the Cardinals their first world championship.

1931: This was Pepper Martin's Series. "The Wild Horse of the Osage" was an early-day Lou Brock or Vince Coleman as he did everything to distract and defeat Connie Mack's great Philadelphia Athletics team. He stole five bases, drove in five runs and scored five runs in his daring style as the Cardinals finished off the A's behind Burleigh Grimes in the finale at Sportsman's Park.

1984: The Gashouse Gang had its hands full with the Detroit Tigers as Dizzy Dean was kayoed while pinch-running in the fifth game. He forgot to duck as Tiger shortstop Billy Rogell fired to first on a double play ball hit by Martin. The ball hit Dean in the forehead prompting the famous medical report: "They X-rayed Dizzy's head and found nothing."

But there was plenty left in his arm as he blanketed the Tigers 11-0 in the finale at Briggs Stadium (now Tiger Stadium). The game was marred by the left-field bleacher fans pelting Joe Medwick with ripe vegetables. Medwick was ordered out of the game by Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis against the wishes of himself and manager Frankie Frisch, but Cardinals had a big lead anyway.

1946: Harry "The Cat" Brecheen, the Cardinals' 1946 version of John Tudor, won three games against the Boston Red Sox in the Series, including a 4-3 decision in the finale at Sportsman's Park. Enos Slaughter scored the winning run on his famous mad dash in the bottom of the eighth. Slaughter was running on the pitch when Harry Walker lined a double — not a single as the story goes — into left-center. Slaughter ran through the stop sign of third base coach Mike Gonzalez and beat shortstop Johnny Pesky's late throw home for the Cardinals' sixth world title.

1964: Bob Gibson came back on two days' rest and gave it all he had without his best stuff. National League MVP Ken Boyer had a three-run homer and Lou Brock also homered as Gibson took a 7-3 lead into the ninth at the old Busch Stadium. He hung on despite home runs by Phil Linz and Clete Boyer and got Bobby Richardson on a pop fly to bring an end to an 18-year Series drought for the Cardinals.

1987: Gibson was the man again with three Series wins after returning in September from a broken leg suffered in July. At Fenway Park, he shut down the Impossible Dream Red Sox as Julian Javier delivered the telling blow, a three-run homer off Jim Lonborg, who went with two days' rest after beating the Cardinals twice. Gibson allowed only five hits and fanned George Scott to wrap up a 7-2 win.

So far, so good. But things have turned sour since then. 1988: Gibson was going for his eighth straight Series win in the finale against the Tigers at Busch Stadium and had a one-hitter in the seventh inning when Curt Flood slipped after misjudging Jim Northrup's line drive that turned into a two-run triple. Mickey Lolich allowed only a late home run by Mike Shannon as he got his third win of the Series, 4-1.

1982: The Cardinals returned home from Milwaukee trailing 3-2 but won 13-1 in a game that lasted five hours through three rain delays to even the Series. The Brewers led 3-1 in the sixth inning of the finale before Keith Hernandez drove in two and George Hendrick drove in the game-winner. Joaquin Andujar was taken out of the lineup.

ting into a fight with Brewer second baseman Jim Gantner, but Bruce Sutter was flawless in the last two innings as Series MVP Darrell Porter drove in an insurance win in a 6-3 victory.

1985: The Cardinals felt they were robbed by a bad call in the sixth game at Kansas City and had to play Game 7. John Tudor couldn't make a good pitch all night and Darrell Motley had a two-run homer in the second to start the ball rolling. It didn't stop until the Royals led 11-0 (shades of Dizzy Dean, the Tigers and 1934). Andujar and Whitey Herzog were ejected for getting in some parting shots at Don Denkinger as the Cardinals ended a great season in less-than-graceful fashion.

1987: The powerful Minnesota Twins scored single runs in four innings without a home run at the Metrodome to overcome an early 2-0 deficit. The Cardinals just didn't have enough firepower with Jack Clark and Terry Pendleton out of the lineup.

The next time the Cardinals are in the World Series, how about a nice five-game win?
